The Theatre B.F.A. Design and Technology track is a 129-hour degree program designed to prepare students for careers in the design and technology fields of theatre and entertainment with a thorough foundation in theatre.

Overview

Class work is augmented with practical production experiences in the areas of scenic, costume, lighting, and sound design. The first two years of the program focus on technical skills, theory, script analysis, theatre history, dramatic literature, drafting, visual arts, and 2D and 3D CAD.

Students are evaluated annually and must meet professional standards to successfully complete the B.F.A. During the junior and senior years emphasis is on specialization in comprehensive technology or design training. Qualified students have the opportunity to assist principal designers and technical directors and may be selected to design and execute designs for main stage productions.

The junior year is spent in preparing the student's professional portfolio, which is essential for those planning to enter the highly competitive job market. The summer between junior and senior year is highlighted by the required professional internship.

Schedule Your Interview

All interested students must interview with a faculty member before being accepted to the program. Schedule your interview through Acceptd.

Requirements

The faculty evaluates students desiring to become majors via an interview and portfolio review. All prospective students must prepare and provide the following:

- Portfolio of theatre work and/or other related areas (art/photography/etc)
- Résumé of theatre-related work
- Three current letters of recommendation
- Transcripts of prior college credits
- Headshot (doesn't need to be professional)

These items are separate from any items requested by UCF admissions. Please bring these with you to your interview.

You may interview before completing your application to the university, but we do require that you have started the application process and strongly recommend that you submit your application to UCF prior to auditioning.

You cannot be accepted into the B.F.A. program without being accepted to the university.
