University of Central Florida

The Theatre B.F.A. Stage Management track is a 129-hour degree program focusing on an thorough foundation of all disciplines of theatre. Students will take courses in design, stagecraft and technology, performance, directing, theatre history, and literature.

Overview

The Theatre B.F.A. Stage Management track serves those students interested in a career in stage management. It is offered for students who, upon graduation, plan to pursue a specialized career in the entertainment industry. Because of the university's location in one the world's top entertainment destinations, UCF is a top choice for students interested in all aspects and avenues of stage management. B.F.A. standards are high, both for admission and for continuation in the program.

Multiple courses in theatrical management focus on management theory, rehearsal and performance management, paperwork, organizational theory, contracts and the business of theatre. Students expand upon the classroom experience through interaction with leading industry professionals and site visits to local entertainment venues. Students must complete four stage management assignments before graduation. Qualified students may be selected to work on outside professional projects.

Students are evaluated annually and must meet professional standards to successfully complete the B.F.A. The summer between junior and senior year is highlighted by the required professional internship, where work with practicing professionals continues to refine the students' skills and prepare them for stage management positions in the entertainment industry or for further study in graduate school.

Schedule Your Interview

All interested students must interview with a faculty member before being accepted to the program. Schedule your interview through our website.

Requirements

The faculty evaluates students desiring to become majors via an interview and promptbook review. All prospective students must prepare and provide the following:

- Résumé
- Headshot (doesn't need to be professional)
- Three current letters of recommendation
- One promptbook (or examples of organizational paperwork)
- Personal statement discussing their personal and academic goals
- Transcripts of prior college credits

These items are separate from any items requested by UCF admissions. Please bring these with you to your interview.

You may interview before completing your application to the university, but we do require that you have started the application process and strongly recommend that you submit your application to UCF prior to auditioning.

You cannot be accepted into the B.F.A. program without being accepted to the university.
